A notable exception is New Zealand, where in the first two decades of the 21st century, under the influence of international television, "football" has been gaining prevalence, despite the dominance of other codes of football, namely rugby union and rugby league.[10]

[b] Phaininda and episkyros were Greek ball games.

[18][19][20][21][22][23] As with pre-codified mob football, the antecedent of all modern football codes, these three games involved more handling the ball than kicking it.[24][25]

[43] In the second half of the century, the European Cup and the Copa Libertadores were created, and the champions of these two club competitions would contest the Intercontinental Cup to prove which team was the best in the world.[44] Football is generally a free-flowing game, with play stopping only when the ball has left the field of play or when play is stopped by the referee for an infringement of the rules.
